LOS ANGELES | SAN FRANCISCO | WASHINGTON, D.C. | PHILADELPHIA | NEW YORK

Summer is traditionally the time to bask in the sun. But in case you hadn't noticed, it can get awfully hot out there! For a change of pace and with five great cities to explore, here are a few indoor options to help you beat the heat. These attractions are staffed by ethical employers who treat their workers with dignity. Have a great summer and let's all chill our way to a stronger America!

Los Angeles

El Capitan Theatre: There is no more festive place to catch a Disney premiere than this iconic theater in the heart of Hollywood.

Langer's Deli: Try the world-famous #19 pastrami sandwich. We can already hear you drooling

Staples Center-L.A. Live: whether it's for a concert or a sporting event, all the truly cool people hang out at Staples including – starting in the fall – new NBA superstars Anthony Davis, Kawhi Leonard and Paul George.

San Francisco

SF Museum of Modern Art: Warhol, Kahlo, Richter...you'll meet 'em all at this downtown icon.

San Jose Center for the Performing Arts: Enjoy the best of Broadway.

Top of the Mark: The 19th Floor of the InterContinental Mark Hopkins offers a view that is, well, top flight.

Washington, D.C.

Library of Congress: The nation's largest.

Union Station: Even without a train to catch, between the food, shops and bustle, you'll want to stay all day.

National Air & Space Museum: You can't go wrong at any of the Smithsonian museums, and the National Air & Space Museum is celebrating the 50th Anniversary of the moon landing.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia Mint: One of only six places where our currency is produced.

Philadelphia Museum of Art: Don't forget to say "Yo" to the famed Rocky statue.

Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts: Offering a little bit of everything including, later this summer "Hamilton."

New York

Lincoln Center: A hub of culture

Metropolitan Museum of Art: No visit is complete without a visit to the Met. Bring comfy shoes. The museum covers 11.5 acres.

Citi Field: OK we cheated since this one's outdoors, but you won't want to miss Union Night at Citi Field on September 29!
